

Orienteering at Carding Mill Valley

The medium course

Approximately 1 kilometre long with 95 metres total climb.

Orienteering is fun, family-friendly and suitable for almost every age. For children in particular, it promotes independent decision-making and self-reliance, as well as getting them out in the fresh air to burn off some energy.

What to do:

You can either follow the suggested course or just wander around with the map and see what posts you can find. This is how to follow the medium course:

The start

Firstly, find the start and finish post, marked number 28 on the eastern corner of the car park.

The controls

In an anti-clockwise direction, find your way to each numbered control post on the course. The lines show the correct order. Use paths and landscape features to guide you. As you go, note down the code letter on each post in the highlighted box.

The finish

The finish is back where you started. Why not try following the same course backwards for a different challenge.

Terrain

The course follows natural pathways and mixed terrain and can be muddy and slippery, so please wear appropriate footwear. Some sections are steep too.

Handy tip

The posts on which the control markers sit are all positioned to face north. This can help you position your map if you do not have a compass with you.
