

Where can I go?

Dogs are very welcome at Cotehele.

At all times they should be kept in sight and under close control. Although dogs behave most of the time, they might still scare birds or other animals away from their young. Eggs and chicks on their own will get cold and might die or get eaten.

For everyone's safety and enjoyment dogs need to be kept on a lead:

- around the visitor facilities
- in the Barn restaurant and the Edgcumbe tea-room
- in grazing areas when livestock is present so they aren't disturbed

We're happy for you to bring your dog into the restaurant or tea-room so you can enjoy a cuppa or lovely lunch after your walk and there's lots of seating outside as well if the weather's good.

Only assistance dogs are allowed in buildings (apart from our eateries and reception) and in the garden.

Where can my dog get a drink?

Dogs can get a refreshing drink of clean water outside the:

- toilet blocks
- visitor reception
- restaurant and tea-room
- mill buildings

What should we do if my dog poops?

What if my dog gets separated from me?

Where else can I go with my dog?

Remember... dogs left in cars, even on a cool day, can die.

To keep Cotehele clean and safe, here's what you should do:

In areas where other people walk, play and picnic please bag it and dispose of it either in a bin or at home.

Our rangers trim back growth around our walking routes, so please don't flick poop into the grass at the side of paths, as it's a health hazard for them while they're working.

There are four bins on the estate for dog waste bags (see the map inside). Please use these for your dog bags or take them home to dispose of. Leaving bags on paths (or in trees) spoils the beauty of this special place and everyone's enjoyment of it.

Contact a member of staff or call the property office (number below) and they will help reunite you.

The National Trust cares for over 700 miles of beautiful coastline and 600,000 acres of countryside with spectacular scenery so there are plenty of places for your walkies.
