Introduction

Woolsthorpe Manor, known throughout the world as the birthplace and family home of Sir Isaac Newton, is held by the Trust for its importance in shaping the modern view of the world and its role in contributing towards the inspiration which generated modern scientific thinking. Breaking free of a world dominated by faith and superstition, in the grounds of this humble manor, Newton started to experiment, an almost unheard of notion at the time, but a concept that would later change the world.

- Situated in Woolsthorpe by Colsterworth, Lincolnshire, 8 miles from Grantham
